

The Center for Career Services is pleased to present the results of the Syracuse University Class of 2004 Placement Report. The following provides information on the post-graduate activities of bachelor's degree recipients from December 2003 and May, June, and August 2004. This report is based on responses from 1,184 out of a total of 2,383 bachelor degree recipients, representing 50% of the graduating class.

The majority of information in this report was received in response to an online survey emailed in October and December and a mailing done in November of 2004. We would especially like to thank all of our colleagues in the Career Services Network who contributed information to this year's report: Connie Caldwell from the School of Architecture; Marilyn Kerr from the College of Arts and Sciences; Felicia Otero-Haskins from the College of Human Services and Health Professions, Debra Eischen from the School of Information Studies; Ed Pulaski from the Martin J. Whitman School of Management; Karen McGee from the S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications; and Rose Crisalli from the College of Visual and Performing Arts.

The placement results for the Class of 2004 saw a marked improvement over the past few years and reflected the increase in entry-level hiring predicted by most experts. For the first time in five years, there was an increase in the percentage of students who reported working full time and average salaries bounced back after two years of decline. Following are the highlights from this year's report compared with data from the past few years.

- The placement rate (full-time employment plus graduate school attendance) for the Class of 2004 was 95%, up sharply from the 89% reported for 2003, 90.5% for 2002 and the 90% for 2001. This year even exceeded the previous high of 94% reported in 2000.
- The number of graduates reporting full-time employment rose to 77% after falling progressively throughout the previous five years. In 1999, we saw a high of 82%, falling to 80% in 2000, 74% in 2001 and 2002, to a low of 71% in 2003.
- The perceived quality of employment for our graduates who responded still remains high. For 2004, 91% of those employed indicated that their position was related to their career goals. This compares favorably to the 92% in 2003, 91% in 2002, 88% in 2001, and 92% in 2000.
- Graduate School attendance remained steady. For 2004 graduates, 18% reported that they are continuing their studies, leveling off after several years of steady increases. In 2003, 18% also reported that they were continuing their education, building on steady increases from 16% in both 2002 and 2001, 14% in 2000, 13% in 1999, and 9% in 1998.
- Average salaries rebounded this year. The average salary for Syracuse University graduates in 2004 was $34,770 compared to $33,679 in 2003, $34,705 in 2002 and $34,851 in 2001. This ends a two-year slide that followed 10 years of steady increases.
- On-campus recruiting continues to be an important source of jobs for many graduates. Overall for 2004, 15% of respondents reported that they obtained their positions through on-campus recruiting, the same that was reported in 2003, but still falling short of the recruiting 'boom' years of 2001 and 2000 when 21% and 23% respectively found positions through on-campus recruiting. Graduates from Management (37%) Engineering and Computer Science (26%), and Information Studies (19%), continue to experience the greatest benefit from on-campus recruiting.

- The vast majority of graduates still find positions by developing their own employment leads. Forty-three percent of all respondents report that they obtained their position by either networking or applying directly to an organization. This result emphasizes the importance of our counseling and programming services that are geared toward helping students become more effective in networking and pursuing non-advertised job leads.
- Internships remain one of the most effective ways of securing full-time employment for the Class of 2004 as 14% indicate that they obtained their position as a result of an internship or previous position with their employer. The National Association of Colleges and Employers recently reported that, for the fourth consecutive year, employers rated their internship programs as the most effective method they have to recruit new college graduates. According to the same report, beyond hiring their own interns, employers rate internships or relevant work experience as very high in their evaluation of candidates.
- There are also some interesting patterns in our graduates who are continuing their education. Of all graduates who reported that they are attending graduate school full-time from the Class of 2004, 26% are enrolled at Syracuse University compared to 38% in 2003, 39% in 2002 and 29% in 2001. Sixteen percent of graduates who report that they are attending graduate school full-time are in law school, which is consistent with the previous two years but still much lower than the 33% in 2001. Twelve percent report that they are attending medical programs, up slightly from the 10% the previous year.
- The geographic profile of our graduates remains virtually the same as past years. Our graduates found employment in 35 states and several foreign countries, (3% found employment abroad), but most stay within this region of the country. For 2004, 49% of respondents who are employed full-time are working in New York State. Another 23% report working in one of the states adjoining New York (MA, CT, VT, NJ or PA) For 2004, 11% indicated that they were employed in Central New York, consistent with the 12% for 2003 and 10% for the previous two years. Fifty-one percent of respondents attending graduate school full-time are doing so in New York State with another 19% in adjoining states. In 2004, the percentage of respondents reporting full-time employment in New York State was 48%, attending graduate school full-time was 65%.

The results for the Class of 2004 are very encouraging, reflecting a significant improvement in the entry-level job market and indicating that the vast majority of Syracuse graduates are able to obtain meaningful employment or graduate school admission within six months of their graduation.

Again, we greatly appreciate the help we have received from our colleagues in compiling this year's placement data. We also welcome comments and suggestions from the Syracuse University community regarding future improvements to our survey process or reporting format. Please feel free to contact us directly with your questions or thoughts. Thank You!
